BUFFALO, N.Y. (WIVB) - New York State health officials are investigating four cases of E.coli infection and News 4 has learned that the latest case involves Rob Ormsby, an 18-year-old from Tonawanda.

A spokesman for Ormsby's family told News 4 that he is in "very serious condition" at the VA Hospital.

The E.coli outbreak could be linked to a food recall from Rich Products.

Last week, Rich Products recalled close to 100 tons of its frozen food snacks sold under the "Farm Rich" label. You can find a full list of the recalled items here .
